http://www.cascom.army.mil/g_staff/g3/SUOS/index.htm

Preface: The Army Training Network, AR 350-1, ADP 7-0, ADRP 7-0, FM 7-0 and GTA 07-09-003 (The Army's Methodology for Training) assist Army personnel in achieving the Army's Number 1 Priority: Readiness. This graphic training aid (GTA) provides sustainment unit training and doctrine resources to assist in the training effort.

Resources are divided into individual and collective, logistics, personnel services, health services support, and sustainment estimate resources based on the website's designed purpose.

- Provides sustainment leaders with additional training tools to assist in reaching training proficiency.
- Accessed in Central Army Registry (www.adtdl.army.mil/) and on the Sustainment Unit One Stop Portal (SUOS) (www.cascom.army.mil/g_staff/g3/SUOS/index.htm).
- This document supersedes TC 4-0.01, Sustainment Training Strategy and Guide. Updated information previously located in TC 4-0.01 transferred to the SUOS Portal and managed by Proponent Leads.

Progressive Training

Crawl Phase	Training is introduced, taught, demonstrated and executed by the numbers. During the crawl phase, the basic skills that set the standard for advancement to other levels are mastered. Studying basic techniques and methods ensure the task or staff actions are correctly programmed into the Soldier's subconscious after a few repetitions.
Walk Phase	Once a unit has developed a sufficient proficiency level in basic skills the walk phase begins. Leaders introduce Soldiers and staffs to more advanced techniques. During this phase, Soldiers practice the new techniques by the numbers but with autonomy and less leader guidance.
Run Phase	In the run phase, Soldiers and units execute scenario driven training at combat speed with supervision and Observer, Coach, Trainers. As a Soldier's performance levels increase, conditions under which the tasks are performed become more demanding while standards remain constant.

Conducting Sustainment Estimates

Mission analysis for sustainment planners should be a focused mental effort to define the current operational environment in terms of what do I need (requirements), what do I have (capabilities), what I do not have (shortfalls) and how do I get what I need (request format and distribution method).

- Requirements
 - Consumption Rates (Offense versus Defense etc.)
 - Supported Units (including Changes During the Operation)
 - Distribution Assessment (Travel Time/Distance, Preparation and Off-Load Requirements, Special Employment Considerations, Communications etc.)
 - Threats (Cyber, CBRNE, etc.)
 - Basic Load Replenishment
- Capabilities
 - Available Assets (Units, Personnel, Equipment, Facilities etc.)
 - Haul/Storage Capacity/Weight versus Cube
 - Soldier Management (Personnel Readiness, Accountability, Strength Management, etc.)
- Shortfall or Excess (Culmination Point)
 - Identify (Resource or Distribution Shortfall) and Mitigate Risk
 - Delivery Method (LRP/Supply Point/Air)
- Analysis
 - Is the mission supportable?
 - Does this mission extend operational reach?
 - Does this mission provide a tactical advantage?

Sustainment Common Operating Picture

“A single display of relevant information within a commander’s area of interest tailored to the user’s requirements and based on common data and information shared by more than one command.” – ADRP 6-0

Sustainment personnel should always be able to answer:

- Where sustainment assets are on the battlefield?
- Who is the priority of support?
- How do we support from current locations?
- How do we get support from current locations?
- When, to where, and in what sequence do we displace to ensure continuous operations?

Essentials:

- Key and essential movements in the first 24, 48, 72, and 96 hours
- Bulk fuel nodes and distribution plans
- Critical munitions status and distribution plans
- Internal and external combat power, commonly referred to as the combat slant
- Medical nodes, locations, capacity, and bed status

Inputs:

Command and Support Relationships

Key to development of sustainment estimates and the sustainment common operating picture remains command and support relationships identified in the operations process via orders using doctrinal terminology. ADRP 5-0 Command and Support Relationship Tables are located on pages 18-19 of this document for reference.

Army Command Relationships

“Command relationships define superior and subordinate relationships between unit commanders. By specifying a chain of command, command relationships unify effort and enable commanders to use subordinate forces with maximum flexibility.” – ADRP 5-0

If relationship is:	Then inherent responsibilities:
	Have command relationship with:	May be task-organized by: ¹	Unless modified, ADCON responsibility goes through:	Are assigned position or AO by:	Provide liaison to:	Establish/maintain communications with:	Have priorities established by:	Can impose on gaining unit further command or support relationship of:
Organic	All organic forces organized with the HQ	Organic HQ	Army HQ specified in organizing document	Organic HQ	N/A	N/A	Organic HQ	Attached; OPCON; TACON; GS; GSR; R; DS
Assigned	Combatant command	Gaining HQ	Gaining Army HQ	OPCON chain of command	As required by OPCON	As required by OPCON	ASCC or Service-assigned HQ	As required by OPCON HQ
Attached	Gaining unit	Gaining unit	Gaining Army HQ	Gaining unit	As required by gaining unit	Unit to which attached	Gaining unit	Attached; OPCON; TACON; GS; GSR; R; DS
OPCON	Gaining unit	Parent unit and gaining unit; gaining unit may pass OPCON to lower HQ ¹	Parent unit	Gaining unit	As required by gaining unit	As required by gaining unit and parent unit	Gaining unit	OPCON; TACON; GS; GSR; R; DS
TACON	Gaining unit	Parent unit	Parent unit	Gaining unit	As required by gaining unit	As required by gaining unit and parent unit	Gaining unit	TACON; GS; GSR; R; DS

Note: ¹ In NATO, the gaining unit may not task-organize a multinational force. (See TACON.)

ADCON	administrative control	HQ	headquarters
AO	area of operations	N/A	not applicable
ASCC	Army Service component command	NATO	North Atlantic Treaty Organization
DS	direct support	OPCON	operational control
GS	general support	R	reinforcing
GSR	general support-reinforcing	TACON	tactical control

Army Support Relationships

“Commanders establish support relationships when subordination of one unit to another is inappropriate. Commanders assign a support relationship when—

- The support is more effective if a commander with the requisite technical and tactical expertise controls the supporting unit rather than the supported commander.
- The echelon of the supporting unit is the same as or higher than that of the supported unit. For example, the supporting unit may be a brigade, and the supported unit may be a battalion. It would be inappropriate for the brigade to be subordinated to the battalion; hence, the echelon uses an Army support relationship.
- The supporting unit supports several units simultaneously. The requirement to set support priorities to allocate resources to supported units exists. Assigning support relationships is one aspect of mission command.

Army support relationships allow supporting commanders to employ their units’ capabilities to achieve results required by supported commanders. “ – ADRP 5-0

If relationship is:	Then inherent responsibilities:
	Have command relationship with:	May be task-organized by:	Receives sustainment from:	Are assigned position or an area of operations by:	Provide liaison to:	Establish/maintain communications with:	Have priorities established by:	Can impose on gaining unit further command or support relationship by:
Direct support¹	Parent unit	Parent unit	Parent unit	Supported unit	Supported unit	Parent unit; supported unit	Supported unit	See note ¹
Reinforcing	Parent unit	Parent unit	Parent unit	Reinforced unit	Reinforced unit	Parent unit; reinforced unit	Reinforced unit; then parent unit	Not applicable
General support-reinforcing	Parent unit	Parent unit	Parent unit	Parent unit	Reinforced unit and as required by parent unit	Reinforced unit and as required by parent unit	Parent unit; then reinforced unit	Not applicable
General support	Parent unit	Parent unit	Parent unit	Parent unit	As required by parent unit	As required by parent unit	Parent unit	Not applicable

Note: ¹ Commanders of units in direct support may further assign support relationships between their subordinate units and elements of the supported unit after coordination with the supported commander.
